U. S. Offers Plan to Assure Open Door in China

HUGHES PROPOSAL ON CHINA POLICY BRINGS ON DEBATE

Plan Would Create International Board to Examine Present and Future Concessions.

WOULD BIND POWERS TO UPHOLD PRINCIPLE

Britain and Italy Accept Plan in Principle, But France and Japan Withhold Assent.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS. Washington, January 17.—An American proposal to redefine the open door policy in China and create an international board to examine both existing and future concessions which appear to conflict with it was debated without decision today by the Far Eastern committee of the Washington conference.

The British and Italians accepted the plan in principle, but the French withheld assent to some of its provisions, and the Japanese reserved judgment pending communication with Tokyo. The subject will be taken up again tomorrow, with all signs pointing to a long and interesting discussion.

In brief, the American resolution would bind the United States, Great Britain, Japan, France, Italy, Belgium, Portugal and the Netherlands not to seek special spheres of influence in China nor secure concessions or monopolies which would abridge the principle of equal economic and commercial opportunity.

Board of Reference. China, on her part, would agree to co-operate in maintaining that equality, and the nine powers collectively would authorize establishment of a board of reference to review present and future concessions to determine whether they conflict with the open-door thus defined.

Except for another inconclusive session of the Shantung negotiators and informal exchanges among the naval "big five" regarding the Pacific fortifications agreement, the meeting of the Far Eastern committee constituted the total of conference activities during the day. At the Shantung conversations the question of mines was discussed with no apparent progress and the fortifications problem remained unsolved tonight despite receipt by the Japanese of partial instructions from Tokyo.

It was around the proposal for an inquiry into concessions now established in China as well as those proposed in the future, that most of the debate in the Far Eastern committee centered. By some of the delegates it was understood that such an inquiry might open up the whole question of Japanese holdings in Manchuria, while in other quarters it was suggested that the resolution might, by implication, lead to a review by the board of the famous "twenty-one demands" controversy.

Hughes Questioned. In that connection it was pointed out that whereas the board's duties in connection with future concessions would be confined under the terms of the resolution to "investigation and

Lillian Russell To Probe Working Immigration Law

She Sails for Europe Determined to End Tragedy of "Quota Cases."

New York, January 17.—Lillian Russell sailed on the steamship George Washington, Tuesday, determined to get at the heart of the American immigration question.

The famous actress holds a commission as immigration inspector, which she was given after long conferences with Secretary of Labor Davis. She expects to play a humanity role in a tragedy that she declares has held already too much heartache and suffering.

Followed by dozens of farewell messages from citizens who have relatives on the other side, Miss Russell—who is the wife of Alexander P. Moore, publisher—will visit the ports of embarkation in England, Italy and France, to discover why immigrants who have staked their all on the hope of reaching America are allowed to start on a fruitless journey.

"I am going to find out," she said, "just what are the conditions which permit a mother to sail for America when it is practically certain that her family will be broken up as a result. The provisions that allow a mother to come in and send her children back just because they were born in another country seems to me absurd, and I hope something can be done about the matter at the source of the trouble."

"I am especially interested in the welfare of the children. The immigration law, in restricting the entrance of children, as beyond the quota limit, seems to me all wrong. It should be changed so it frequently does serious injustice."

Miss Russell described some of her findings during years of investigation among the foreign born. "She was firmly convinced," she said, "that mill owners should be compelled to educate the children who work for them. She was also of the opinion that some redress should be given the aliens who come to this country penniless, only to be barred at Ellis island. 'They have no homes, no friends to whom they can go back. Their plight is desperate,' she asserted.

Proudly holding her inspector's commission, Miss Russell seemed the picture of health while waiting for the ship to sail.

BAD EARTHQUAKE SHOCKS ARE FELT IN LOS ANGELES

Los Angeles, January 17.—Severe earthquakes were felt in many sections of Los Angeles tonight, shattering window glass in some quarters and shaking frame buildings. There were nine distinct shocks between 7:20 and 8:30 o'clock, which agitated many residents. Many believed them earthquakes, while others attributed them to big gun practice of four dreadnoughts of the Pacific fleet.

SOLDIERS BURIED NOOSE ON NECK, RECORDS DISCLOSE

Two Bodies Dug Up Had Ropes and Black Caps Still On, Probers Are Informed.

WATSON RAPS BURIAL IN COMMON GRAVEYARD

Scores Burial of Executed Criminals Alongside Soldiers Who Fell in Battle in France.

Washington, January 17.—After presentation of testimony by way of denial, war department records, submitted today to the senate committee investigating charges that American soldiers had been hanged without trial in France, showed that on the bodies of two men dug up in the little cemetery at Bazailles, the ropes and black caps in which they were put to death on the gallows had not been removed prior to burial.

Edwin E. Lamb, of Hartford, Conn., a colonel overseas, testified that in the case of one of the men hanged the body was placed quickly in a coffin and, so far as he recalled, the rope and cap were left just where the hangman had placed them. But in both cases, other witnesses declared, they were removed before the bodies were prepared for shipment home to relatives.

All Identified. Senator Watson, democrat, Georgia, whose charges concerning illegal executions led to the investigation, sharply attacked the burial of men hanged for "unmentionable crimes" alongside of soldiers who fell in battle. Asking a witness if white men and negroes were buried in the same part of the cemetery, the senator was told that they were—that all were soldiers.

Taking up the charges of former service men that bodies shipped here from France were handled in helter-skelter fashion, without proper effort to establish identity, officers and men attached to the graves registration service declared there was no foundation for such assertions, and insisted that not one body was brought home until identification had been positively established.

Turning from burial methods, John Sebastian, a sailor or Jacksonville, Fla., told how, when a prisoner at Gieves, he saw the bodies of two negroes lying face down on the ground and was informed by a guard that two negroes had been lynched. He was unable, however, to say whether the bodies were those of the men put to death by a soldier mob.

NEW RATE SCALE TO BAN ALLEGED DISCRIMINATIONS

Tentative List Is Announced by State Railroad Commission Pending Final Hearing.

RAILROADS DIVIDED INTO TWO CLASSES

Many Reductions Made in Classified Rates—Old "Basing Points" Abolished in Plan.

Removal of discriminations said to have existed in intrastate freight rate classifications in Georgia is made in a new scale of tentative rates for classified traffic established by the state railroad commission in an order issued Tuesday. The new rates will be considered as tentative until March 7, when a final hearing will be held to determine the permanency of the new scale.

The new scale was established after extended hearings had been held in the case which is known as the Georgia freight rate case. The commission initiated the proceedings after the claim had been made that more than 1,000 small towns and cities of Georgia were victims of discrimination through the work of the "long and short haul" principle.

In the new system the old "basing points" are abolished and rates are fixed on as nearly a mileage basis as possible. The railroads of the state are divided into two classes, the larger lines and connections being placed in Class A and all other lines being placed in Class B.

Many Reductions. Many reductions in classified rates are contained in the new system, although some of the rates between basing points, which include Atlanta and other large cities, are increased slightly. The commission, in its order, invited criticism from carriers and shippers, such criticism to be submitted at the session March 7. The commission will not reopen the case, but will receive suggestions at its March meeting.

The Georgia rate case originated last July when the commission ordered

$10,000 Slander Suit Is Filed Against Warden

Woman Accuses Johnson of Telling Her Uncle She Was Immoral.

Charges that City Warden W. H. Johnson had declined to give her financial assistance because she did not comply with improper proposals made by him were contained in a $10,000 slander suit filed Tuesday in the Fulton superior court by Mrs. Hattie Harper, wife of an invalid war veteran, through Attorney Roy Drennan.

Mrs. Harper, who gave her address on Chestnut street, alleged in the suit that as a further step to make her accede to his demands, Warden Johnson caused her uncle to withdraw support he was giving her by going to the uncle and telling him that his niece was an immoral woman.

Mr. Johnson could not be reached by The Constitution Tuesday night. Close friends of the official scoffed at the charges, and declared that they would be disproved. They intimated that the warden's political enemies were behind the suit.

Appealed to Office. Mrs. Harper, who is about 24 years of age, alleges that last September, when she was in destitute circumstances, because of the illness of her husband, she appealed to the warden's office for help. Warden Johnson called on her and gave her immediate assistance, and has since given her money, she says.

On his repeated visits, it is alleged, the warden told Mrs. Johnson that she would have to be a "good sport" if she expected to receive any more money from the city. He became persistent, it is alleged.

ELECTION PLEDGES FOR GOVERNMENT ECONOMY DROPPED

Power of Political "Pull" and Executive Jealousy, Foils Effort for Efficient Administration.

BUDGET CHIEF DAWES, EVEN, IS POWERLESS

Loud-Heralded Promises to Eliminate Wholesale Waste Fall Victim to Tangled Bureaucracy.

Washington, January 17.—The administration's scheme of executive reorganization, one of the basic parts of the program for putting "more business in government," has collapsed, at least for some time.

The collapse is due chiefly to the opposition of cabinet heads to the reorganization of departments that was contemplated.

While efforts will later be made to revive the scheme, and put it into effect, it was stated that to work out a solution would be a very slow process.

President Harding made every effort to accomplish the reorganization, and the obstacles encountered were displeasing to him. But they could not be overcome.

Plan Strikes Snag. Walter F. Brown, of Toledo, was named as personal representative of the president to sit with a joint congressional committee on reorganization. He prepared a detailed report, calling for the consolidation of duplicating bureaus, the elimination of those that were of no value, and the logical grouping of others. His plan would have taken some bureaus from under one cabinet head, and put them under another—and here is where the disagreement arose.

Brown's plan never was made public, and no effort was ever made to put it into effect. The joint congressional committee has been idle, pending word from the administrative end.

Executive reorganization was, as well, a campaign pledge of the republican party. Leaders thought it was

MANY GEORGIANS AT ROAD MEETING

Development of Southern Road Building Chief Topic at American Road Builders' Convention.

BY BESSIE KEMPTON. Constitution Staff Correspondent. Chicago, Ill., January 17.—(Special.)—Development of the south's three hundred million dollar road improvement program was the chief topic of conversation among the 10,000 delegates in attendance upon the American Road Builders' convention which opened here Tuesday morning at the Coliseum.

For the first time in years it was pointed out by officers of the association, southern states and cities sent large delegations to the American Road Builders' congress. One of the largest southern delegations is from Georgia. The state, ten or twelve counties, and the city of Atlanta, being represented. Another state having a number of representatives is North Carolina, where $20,000,000 out of a $50,000,000 bond issue, is now being spent on road construction.

Colonel H. S. Bowley, president of the association, brought a message from President Harding, in which the

AMERICAN LEGION TO AID IN WILSON FOUNDATION WORK

Progress Is Reported for Tuesday by Colonel Jesse Mercer, Local Chairman.

USE OUTSIDE FUND FOR EXPENSE MONEY

All of Contributions to Be Used in Perpetuating Name and Work of Former President.

E. Marvin Underwood, national committeeman of the Woodrow Wilson foundation, announced Tuesday night that the American Legion in Atlanta has agreed to assist the local campaign committee in raising the quota of $14,500, assigned to Atlanta and contiguous territory. The nature of the aid to be given by the legion was not given out.

The local committee, headed by Colonel Jesse Mercer, reported Tuesday that the amount raised Monday during "Wilson hour" was increased Tuesday by upwards of $200.

Mrs. M. S. Smith, of Fitzgerald, sent $5 in gold to the committee Tuesday, stating that she thought nothing but gold would express the admiration she held for the war-time president.

Bank Men Contribute. Attaches of the Fulton National bank forwarded $62.12 to the fund Tuesday. The sum of $12 was received from Robert C. Peary, of the Southern Underwriters' association, with the statement that it was given by employees of the organization's printing department.

Advices to the local committee Tuesday from the national headquarters in New York city indicated that the people throughout the nation are taking much interest in the foundation named for the former national leader.

Mrs. T. T. Stevens, head of the woman's division, stated Tuesday that some people are under the impression that Mr. Wilson is to benefit financially from the movement. The committee wishes to correct the idea, as it is the idea of those conducting the campaign to place the funds in the hands of a responsible board of trustees, who will safely invest it, and from time to time award the income it yields to patriots, statesmen or others who, within a given time, contribute the greatest accomplishment to the advancement of American and democratic principles.

Community Leaders. Announcement that Mrs. Eugene Wilson, of 311 South Chandler street, has been designated chairman for December was made Tuesday night. Those in Decatur desiring to make contributions

U. S. RECEIVES BID TO GENOA PARLEY

Formal Invitation Received at State Department From Ambassador Ricci, of Italy.

Washington, January 17.—The invitation for the United States to participate in the economic and financial conference at Genoa was received at the state department tonight from Ambassador Ricci, of Italy. Officials in making public the text, however, declined to indicate what the attitude of the administration would be toward it. The invitation was addressed to President Harding and was accompanied by a copy of the resolution adopted at Cannes by the allied representatives for the conference.

The text follows: "By order of my government and through the kindness of your excellency, I have the honor to convey to the government of the United States of America the following invitation from the Italian government: 'Pursuant to a resolution of the supreme council of the allied powers, I have the honor to forward to you a copy of a resolution adopted on January 6, 1922, by the allied gov-

BOARD PERSONNEL INCREASED BY ONE FARMER MEMBER

Amendment by Senator Harris, to Restrict Building, Only One Not Killed.

MEASURE IS PASSED BY VOTE OF 63 TO 9

Senators, Glass and Heflin Clash in Heated Debate Prior to Taking of Vote.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS. Washington, January 17.—The first step to bring about farmer representation on the federal reserve board was taken by the senate late today in the passage of the Kellogg-Smith compromise bill increasing the board's appointive membership from five to six and providing that the agricultural interests shall have a spokesman among them.

By the bill, which constitutes an amendment to the federal reserve act, the limited designation of the present law is wiped out and instead of the specific provision for the naming of two bankers to the board, the statute, if agreed to by the house, will direct the president in making appointments to the board to have "due regard to a fair representation of the financial, agricultural, industrial and commercial interests and geographical divisions of the country." The measure also provides that hereafter no federal reserve bank may enter into a contract for banking homes if their cost is to exceed $250,000 unless the consent of congress is first given.

Vote 63 to 9. The vote by which the bill passed was 63 to 9. Seven of those who opposed the proposition were republicans and two democrats. They were: Brandegee, Connecticut; Calder, New York; Edge, New Jersey; Keyes, New Hampshire; McLean, Connecticut; Moses, New Hampshire, and Wadsworth, New York, republicans, and Pomeroy, Ohio, and Williams, Mississippi, democrats.

There were many attempts to change the compromise but all save the amendment restricting construction, by Senator Harris, democrat, Georgia, were killed. The agreement on the compromise, which gave the approval not only of all of the agricultural bloc leaders in the senate but that of President Harding as well, held fast throughout.

Senator Smith, democrat, South Carolina, who first offered the specific provision as to farmer representation withdrew his amendment and called upon his democratic colleagues to support the substitute which he declared to be adequate and to meet all demands.

To Name Farmer. While the senate was moving slowly toward passage of the measure,

FAIRFIELD DENIES HE CONFESSED

Fitzgerald, Ga., January 17.—(Special.)—After having refused to testify for the state Monday in the case of Fred Stubbs, jointly indicted with 14 others for the murder of W. T. Reed, A. B. & A. engineer, asserting that he would not corroborate a confession he is alleged to have made, O. C. Fairfield will be placed on trial Wednesday morning under one of the joint indictments.

Fairfield's action Monday caused one of the greatest surprises in court history here, when he refused to repeat the reported confession which he is said to have given Solicitor-General Wall, several grand juries and other persons.

Much delay was caused in Stubbs' trial on account of Fairfield's alleged illness, and when it became known Monday that he refused to corroborate his alleged confession, in which he implicated Stubbs and 12 others, the state closed without placing him on the stand.

Jury Deadlocked. The jury in the Stubbs' trial early tonight still was apparently hopelessly deadlocked, and a mistrial appeared likely. In his statement to the jury, the defendant denied taking part in the shooting on the night of July 5, which resulted in Reed's death later in an Atlanta hospital. He attempted to prove he was elsewhere at the time the shooting occurred. The case went to the jury at 5 o'clock Monday afternoon.

Solicitor Wall attempted to place Fairfield on trial this afternoon, but the defendant announced to the court he was unable financially to employ counsel, and requested that McDonald & McDonald be appointed to represent him.

Employs Counsel. Judge Gower, however, appointed J. R. Bedgood to handle the case, with the privilege of conferring with the other two attorneys, in view of retaining their services.

After holding a conference with Fairfield, Mr. Bedgood stated the defendant desired to employ McDonald & McDonald, and that he would retire from the case. The trial will start tomorrow morning.

GEORGE STUBBS FOUND NOT GUILTY. Greenville, January 17.—(Special.)—Charged with attempting to intimidate strikers on the A. B. & A. railroad, George Stubbs, jointly indicted with 24 other strikers, was found not guilty late this afternoon. These cases have no connection with the murder trials in Fitzgerald.

The cases against the strikers, who reside at Manchester, are up for trial separately. The first case called was that against Stubbs, a locomotive engineer, accused of attempting to intimidate Reeves, a hostler.

Reeves testified that Stubbs accosted him and asked:

"Are you still scabbing?" and then remarked: "If you will come out behind this store there will be one less scab."

The other evidence was corroborative in its nature. The state closed its case at noon.

The defendant took the stand and made a statement, in which he said that he asked Reeves how the latter was getting along scabbing. That Reeves replied: "It is none of your business, but you can make it your business." Now he, the defendant, replied: "If you come out here on the street, I will slap your face."

He asserted that it was nothing but a personal wordy altercation, and that he had heard that Reeves had threatened to kill him if he ever got a chance.

In rebuttal, the state offered two witnesses, who swore they overheard Stubbs tell his counsel, just before he went on the stand:

"The only thing to it was that I just went behind the store and beat hell out of him."

This Is Budget Day of Thrift Week

The Budget System is used by the United States Government. It is saving money for the taxpayers of our country. It is a good thing for any business.

If good for a business it should be good for the home. If good for the home, then good for the individual.

It is simply a matter of planning how your earnings or income are to be paid out, setting aside so much for this need, the other need and so on. One must know first: How this is to be apportioned—never omitting investment or saving, and then make EXPENSES BALANCE. That's the big thing. It can be done, and the Budget helps to do it.

The most important item in the Budget is Savings. For example, allot so much for Food, House, Clothing, Charity, Education and Savings. Make it a point to pay your Savings allotment just as regularly as you pay any of the others.

Come to our Savings Department, and we will help you get started on the right track by putting you on your own PAYROLL.

Hundreds to Pay Tribute to Lee At State Capitol

Hundreds will gather in the legislative hall at the state capitol Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock to participate in celebrating the birthday of General Robert E. Lee, commander of the Confederate army in the civil war.

The program, which is sponsored by all the Confederate organizations of the city, will be in charge of J. S. Dozier, commander of Camp No. 120, U. C. V., and Mrs. John A. Perdrie, president of the Atlanta chapter, U. C. V.

Following the address, crosses of honor will be bestowed on six Atlantians by Mrs. Perdrie, assisted by Mrs. Hal Hertz, custodian of the crosses. The men who will be honored are: Chaplain John A. Randolph, of Fort McPherson; N. L. Bennett, T. J. Buchanan, J. S. Puckett, George W. Smith and W. B. Willis.

A special musical program has been arranged to include songs of the old South, and a number of the old songs of the South will be sung.

Mrs. Charles Love, chairman of the musical program, has announced that the Knights Templars' double quartet will play for the occasion.

Through the courtesy of Karl Karst, president of the City Federation of Musicians, an orchestra will be furnished to play for the occasion.

Ushers for the celebration will be the boys and girls of the Margaret A. Wilson Junior chapter, Children of the Confederacy.

TO DISCUSS PLAN FOR NEW STATE TAX

Details of the proposed state income tax law will be discussed by members of the joint tax committee, appointed at the last session of the legislature, at a meeting to be held early next week, it was announced Tuesday at the office of Governor Hardwick. The meeting was called by the governor after he had communicated Tuesday with George Carswell, representative in the legislature from Wilkinson county, who heads the joint committee.

essential that the executive agencies, which had a misapprehension during the war, should be contracted in the interests of economy and efficiency.

Powers of "Full"

They found what the bureaucrats already knew—that compression was infinitely more difficult than expansion, and that depriving the government employees of their jobs was far easier than hiring.

The bureau chiefs and subordinates, entrenched through years of service, and with friends in congress, and political "pull," could exert influence that would be felt in high places.

It was found as well that many of the new war agencies, created through necessity, would persist for the same reason.

The shipping board and soldier relief agencies are examples.

The budget bureau, likewise, has been able to accomplish little in the direction of actual reorganization, although there has been much "co-opting." The bureau is charged by law with the task of recommending changes in organization where these are considered necessary. Even "Hell-an-Maria" Dawes, hailed as the enemy of bureaucratic incompetence, who is the budget chief, has been blocked by the opposition to change.

Tried Before. An examination of old files of the proceedings of congress will reveal that there was the same demand for executive reorganization after the civil war as that which followed the great war. Senators demanded that the "Aragon states" be cleaned up, and that the hordes of federal officeholders be dismissed. But the agitation then died out without any drastic changes.

There has been no executive reorganization from the time of the birth of the government. Departments were added, bureaus created, and independent offices established as need arose, with little regard for system. And the old order persists.

Here are some of the suggested changes that will fail by the wayside:

Doomed to Fail. Consolidation of the departments of war and the navy into a single department of national defense.

Creation of a single diplomatic-commercial service, to include separate bureaus maintained by the departments of state and commerce.

Establishment of a new department of public welfare to direct all social activities of the government.

Consolidation of all agencies having public works to build.

Consolidation of all agencies of the government concerned with transportation—the shipping board, the interstate commerce commission, the United States labor board.

BULLOCK INSTALLED AS FOOD MEN'S HEAD

Byron C. Kistner, retiring president of the Atlanta Retail Food Dealers' association, was presented with a thirty-second degree Masonic watch charm by members of the association Tuesday night in the Chamber of Commerce building, following the installation of 1922 officers, who are: J. H. Bullock, president; George A. McGaughey, Morris Weinberg and Frank Maloney, vice presidents; W. Y. Akin, treasurer, and H. V. Bergen, secretary.

The report of the association's work of the association's special committee, which was organized to devise ways and means of stopping the crimes which are being perpetrated against retail grocers and meat dealers. The report said that the committee will continue to work, but that crimes against the retailers are even more general than when the committee was organized.

The report also spoke of the opposition of the association to the emergency tax sponsored by the mayor, and the association recommended the passage of an emergency, ten-million dollar bond issue. "The association was the first organized body to sponsor the bond issue which was favorably decided by the voters of Atlanta," said the report.

Municipal Market. The report also referred to the proposed municipal market, declaring that the association will continue to fight for a special election to determine whether or not the people of Atlanta want a municipal market. "The offer was not even considered," says the report.

The report also pointed out that the association has waged a campaign to have peddling regulations of the city enforced, but attempted to use vegetables sold by weight instead of measure, has launched a movement to have houses numbered uniformly within the city limits, and has succeeded in causing the reduction of the cost of ice to merchants, has endeavored to protect retail dealers against gift schemes, and has successfully organized a state association of retail grocers and meat dealers, known as the Georgia Retail Food Dealers' association.

The report says that the association's finances are in good shape and that the year 1921 has been one of the most active in its 37 years of existence.

Names Committee Heads. President Bullock named the following heads of committees: R. L. Barge, membership; W. T. Akin, finance; George A. McGaughey, pure food show; M. M. Bullard, grievance; T. Carroll, entertainment; F. E. Kamper, better business; B. C. Kistner, legislative; J. R. Morris, arbitration; Frank Maloney, magazine; Morris Weinberg, fellowship; and Ernest Bell, pride of Atlanta committee.

The 1922 directors, 30 in number, were also installed.

Lunch at the meeting was supplied by the Atlanta Milling company and the Maddox Coffee company.

CHARTER IS ASKED FOR NEW STATE BANK IN ATLANTA

Atlanta bank capital will be increased nearly half a million dollars through service of petitions filed Tuesday with Secretary of State S. G. McLeander. One of the petitions is by a new bank to be known as the Bank of the State of Georgia, which seeks to increase its capital stock to $250,000. The other petition was filed by the Atlanta Trust company, which seeks to increase its capital stock to $1,300,000 to $1,500,000, or $2,000,000.

The new bank's petition for a charter was filed by officials of the Bankers' Trust company, which now has offices in the Healey building. Those signing the petition were W. D. Manley, J. A. Sasser, D. J. Baker, L. R. Adams and John D. Russell.

latter declared that no single public improvement has done more for the general good of the country than the development of our highway system.

Urges Co-operation. Colonel Bowly told the congress that the advent and development of the American Road Builders' association has had much to do with making the industry what it is. He described its growth since organization in 1922 and asserted that the organization could be made the most potent influence in highway development in this country, if not in the world. The speaker also stressed the importance of co-operation by the association with the United States bureau of public roads, the state highway departments and the American association of state highway officials.

In discussing the growth in road building Colonel Bowly asserted that it was now the principal industry in every civilized country of the world. The United States, he pointed out, stands at the dawn of the greatest road building era of history.

Atlanta President Paul S. Etheridge, of Atlanta, former chairman of the Fulton county board of commissioners and now a member of the British works committee of that body, who is in attendance, Tuesday inspected the various types of paving on exhibit at the coliseum.

W. B. Noel, engineer of the Georgia state highway commission, stated that the Chicago convention is the largest road congress ever held in America and expressed his belief that 1922 would bring about the greatest development of roads in the history of Georgia, both on account of the universal demand for permanent roads and the reduction in price of road building materials.

Both Commissioner Etheridge and Mr. Noel stated that they were in favor of abolishing advertising signs along the highways in Georgia, after Colonel Bowly had urged the members of the association to pledge themselves to use their best efforts to support legislation looking to the properly planned elimination of such unsightly and oft times misleading advertisements on the road.

Among those listed to speak are Professor Arthur H. Blanchard, professor of highway engineering and highway transportation, University of Michigan, and American delegate to the international road congress at Madrid in 1923; Senator James H. McDonald, of Connecticut; Austin B. Fletcher, state highway commissioner of California; J. E. Pennybacker, of New York, for eighteen years chief economist of the United States bureau of public roads; E. M. Upham, chief engineer of the highway department of Delaware; Major A. E. Ducland, of British Columbia, at present city manager of Outremont, Canada, and F. F. Rogers, state highway commissioner of Michigan.

The earliest form of beltless dancing was the quadrille, started about 1815. This was followed by the lancers, invented in 1830.

Shoots Himself To Death While Riding on Train

Greenboro, Ga., January 17.—(Special.)—Charles Fargo, of the firm of Davidson & Fargo, cotton factors, of Augusta, committed suicide on the Georgia train No. 7 approaching Union Point this afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Fargo left Augusta at 2 o'clock to visit Mrs. Fargo's mother in Athens, who is very ill. When Mrs. Fargo went to change cars at Union Point she went into the smoker to find Mr. Fargo and found he had shot himself with a pistol and was dead.

Mr. Fargo was 50 years old. Ill health and financial troubles are given as cause of the suicide.

The coroner from Greensboro went to Union Point to hold the inquest. The body was carried back to Augusta on Georgia train No. 5.

FARMER IS NEAR DEATH FROM BITE BY MAD DOG

Gordon Reeve, farmer, living between Sandy Springs and Dunwoody, near Buckhead, who was bitten by a mad dog recently, is near death, according to Dr. C. M. Adams, who, with state physicians, gave Mr. Reeve serum treatment in Buckhead Tuesday afternoon.

Mr. Reeve, when bitten by the dog thought little of the incident, and when the dog, which was his own, died a few days later of hydrophobia, he did not take treatment. He became ill last Saturday and saw doctors of the state board of health on January 15. They gave him Pasteur treatment, which was afterwards declared useless in his case.

Mr. Reeve will be given another serum treatment Wednesday. He is 65 years old and is living with his widowed mother.

Two hundred and sixty-four women of the British Red Cross society are in England last night nearly 50 were more than 70 years of age.

HIGHWAY BONDS INDORSED IN LAURENS

Dublin, Ga., January 17.—(Special.) The Dublin and Laurens Chamber of Commerce commissioners and other interested citizens have indorsed the plan of issuing $75,000,000 of state bonds for the purpose of building surfaced roads throughout the state.

According to the plans now under consideration, all counties that have previously expended sums of money for bridge and road construction, will be reimbursed for such expenditures. This plan, if carried through as planned, will mean that Laurens county's quota of this money would be $204,370.32.

Properly loaned to farmers or otherwise handled in the aiding of production and marketing, county products, this sum would be of much assistance.

THREE ARE NAMED TO MEMBERSHIP IN KIWANIS CLUB

Three prominent Atlantians were elected to membership in the Kiwanis club Tuesday at its regular weekly luncheon at the Peacock cafe. In the absence of President J. S. Kennedy, Vice President Arthur Brooke occupied the chair.

The new members are G. F. Willis, capitalist; William Grant Smith, vice president of the American Railway Express company, and Dudley Cowles, of D. C. Heath company, publishers.

Songs were furnished by a quartet composed of Leslie Hubbard, Mrs. Legare Davis, Luther White and Miss Willie Shields. They were accompanied by Miss Ethel Beyer.

ICE PLANT FUND STRICKEN FROM BILL

The item of $25,000 for erection of an ice plant at the city crematory was stricken from the permanent finance sheet as presented to council and adopted Monday afternoon. It had been eliminated and reinserted and later cut out again. The measure will be introduced again at an early meeting, according to Alderman D. R. Wilder, who advocated it.

WATKINS REPLIES TO CHARTER FOES AT KIWANIS MEET

Reiterating his recent assertion that over $1,000,000 is wasted annually by the municipal government through general inefficiency of the present administration system and particularly through lack of co-ordination, Councilman Edgar Watkins, author of the "Atlanta charter plan," addressed the Kiwanis club at its weekly luncheon Tuesday and replied to critics of his charter speech one week ago before the Lions' club.

Residents of Birmingham pay $14.49 per capita each year for services rendered by the municipality, while Atlantians pay $20.61 per capita, and the difference in expense to the citizens of the two cities amounts in a year to $1,228,678, Mr. Watkins told the Kiwanians.

"The finance committee recently announced publicly that it considered one of the city boards ignorant and incompetent, and took from the board the right to complete a public building then under construction because of the board's inefficiency," the councilman said.

"During the meeting of council Monday a man who has been a member of council for a number of years made the undeniably statement that for ten years there has been an annual waste of $25,000 at the city prison farm."

"If you want good city government don't sit around and criticize," he concluded. "The man who cusses his government and does not act to better it, is of little value to the city."

Councilman Watkins will make two speeches Wednesday on his proposed city charter for Atlanta. The first address will be made at the regular meeting of the Masonic club at 12:30 o'clock in the Peacock cafe. The Sunny City Four, a male quartet, will furnish music at the meeting, and President William T. Stuchell will preside.

Councilman Watkins will also speak at 8 o'clock in the evening on the ninth floor of the Piedmont hotel to the co-operative charter committee, an organization composed of representatives from 21 local civic organizations.

Dr. M. Ashby Jones, pastor of the Ponce de Leon Avenue church, will preside.

ENDEAVOR SPEAKER URGES NEED OF UNION

Evangelization of the world would be accomplished more easily if the various denominations co-operated in their evangelistic work, an audience of 500 Christian Endeavorers was told Tuesday night by Dr. A. H. Moore, vice president of the World Christian Endeavor union, at a rally of the Atlanta Christian Endeavor union, held at the First Christian church.

Dr. Moore stressed the value of union, and declared that denominational lines should not be so pronounced in carrying the gospel throughout the world. The world union officer spoke to the Atlantians in acceptance of a special invitation. He is considered one of the world's leading authorities on young people's religious work.

Officers for the local union for 1922 were installed. They are as follows: Thomas A. Moore, president; George I. Beattie, P. W. Wilson, Robert M. McFarland, Jr., and H. D. Seere, vice presidents; Miss Ellenore Collier, secretary, and McHenry Brown, treasurer.

An expense budget of $500 for 1922 was over-subscribed. A report of the treasurer showed a substantial balance on hand at the beginning of the new year.

The Harris Street Presbyterian society was awarded a banner for having the greatest percentage of membership present.

IMPROVEMENT CLUB HEARS BELFLOWER

James A. Belflower, park commissioner, addressed the members of the South Boulevard Improvement association Tuesday night at a meeting at the home of W. G. McCalley, 80 Rosalie street, on the plans of the park board, with special reference to proposed improvements at Grant Park.

The association's committee on education reported that its work in obtaining a schoolhouse for the east side of Grant Park is progressing and that concrete results can be expected soon. A. W. Warner, president, presided. The next meeting of the association will be held on the third Tuesday in February.

Victor Records Reduced in List Price

Basing our action on faith in the future when present abnormal conditions will have disappeared ---and desiring to secure for the public a share in the efficiency of manufacture which public appreciation has enabled us to develop in all Victor manufacturing we desire to announce the following reductions in our list prices.

10-inch Black Label, double faced Records now listed at 85c

Reduced to 75c

12-inch-Black Label, double faced Records now listed at $1.35

Reduced to $1.25

These reductions in list prices together with lower prices on Red Seal Records announced some time ago---improvements in standard instrument types without increase in price and the introduction of new models figured on anticipated normal conditions rather than on cost---puts the entire Victor line as a unit on a list price basis substantially lower than at any time in the past and emphasizes again the leadership of the Victor in its commercial field.

This trademark and the trademarked word "Victrola" identify all our products. Look under the lid! Look on the label! VICTOR TALKING MACHINE CO., Camden, N. J.

$1,800,000 SCHOOL BUDGET ADOPTED

The 1922 budget of the board of education, carrying an appropriation of $1,800,000, was adopted Tuesday afternoon by the board of education. Salaries of the administrative officers, directors, principals and teachers, janitors and the wages of regular labor and extra labor total $1,584,440.36.

In the sheet is set aside $2,500 for office supplies, $800,000 for school supplies, and $40,000 for repairs and replacements. It is proposed to take care of necessary new equipment out of the bond funds.

A resolution offered by Commissioner Carl Hutcheson, at the request of citizens of Ansley Park, asking for a new school, was referred to the building committee.

A resolution introduced by Mr. Hutcheson requesting an appropriation of $500 for the purchase of special books for the library of the Normal Training school, which is conducted at the Lee Street school, was referred to the committee on schools and teachers.

Mrs. A. C. Burton, of the fifth ward, appeared and urged the board to include in its plans an annex at the Eighth Avenue school. The board promised to take up the matter along with requests for other new schools.

The board voted to continue teachers in the schools of Kirkwood on their present salary basis until the beginning of a new school year in September.

EXECUTIVE BODY OF CITY CHAMBER WILL MEET TODAY

Members of the executive committee of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce will meet this afternoon at 12:30 o'clock in the Chamber building. At the same time and place Friday the chamber's board of directors will meet to choose eight members for the chamber's 1922 realty board, which board will have charge of the Chamber building, space in which is now being rented to various organizations.

President W. O. Foote said Tuesday that numerous inquiries from other cities relative to business conditions throughout the country are becoming better. Frank Weldon said that among the inquiries was one from a furniture concern of Grand Rapids, Mich., a cap manufacturing concern of New York, and an awning concern of Michigan. He also said that a communication was received Monday from Belgian Congo, asking about the market here on cotton seed and peanut oil machinery.

TYPGRAPHICAL UNION HEAD VISITS ATLANTA

John M. McFarland, of Indianapolis, Ind., head of the International Typographical union, was in Atlanta Tuesday during a brief tour of inspection of cities in the south. Coming here from Nashville, he will leave for Birmingham this evening.

In the interests of members of the union now on strike Mr. McFarland is investigating conditions in various cities where, as he states, many commercial shops have failed to live up to agreements said to have been reached in 1919, respecting the "closed shop" and a 44-hour law.

Mr. McFarland stated that 50 persons who were formerly employed by the local commercial printing concerns, were now striking.

W. B. COLEMAN POST IN SESSION TUESDAY

At the first 1922 meeting of the William B. Coleman post, No. 51, American Legion, Tuesday night in the Ansley hotel, an address was delivered on the Turkish and Russian military situations by Lieutenant Colonel Williams, and a letter thanking the post for the "William G. Coleman Scholarship Fund," by which deserving Georgia Tech juniors, Robert M. Barries, of Emory university, rendered vocal selections at the meeting.

SAVINGS BANK WILL NAME OFFICERS TODAY

Officers of the American Savings bank will be elected for the new year at a meeting of the board of directors this afternoon, it was announced Tuesday. It was stated that J. G. St. Amant would be nominated for the presidency.

Recently a 7 per cent dividend on the capital stock of $200,000 was declared at the annual meeting of the stockholders. Stockholders elected to the board of directors at this meeting were J. C. R. Tech, Jr., Robert M. Barries, F. W. Butler, Isaac H. Haas, William M. Francis, W. A. Simpson and Peter F. Clark.

South Georgia Editors Meeting Great Success

BY JOHN L. HERRING.
Tifton, Ga., January 17.—(Special.)—Tifton was host yesterday to newspapermen and women of the eleventh, second and third congressional districts, the occasion being the regular meeting of the Eleventh District Press association. The local board of trade, the local Woman's club, the domestic science clubs of the A. & M. school, and the local newspapermen were joint hosts.

The afternoon session was devoted to the discussion of the problems of the newspaperman, and the board of trade and domestic science class served a chicken luncheon at the A. & M. school. Tifton enjoyed a full day of festivities, and the visitors appeared to have a good time.

The newspapermen were welcomed by Dr. C. W. Durden and Jack D. McCartney, of Savannah, responded. Addresses were made by John A. Davis, of Albany; Jack Patterson, of Atlanta; and Rowland Turner, of the industrial department of the Southern railway, who talked on creamery and the solution of the problem of the newspaperman.

Mrs. W. H. Robinson, president of the Eleventh District association, presided with a number of ladies in attendance.

At the luncheon, short talks were made by W. E. Aigee, secretary of the board of trade; Mrs. Robinson, H. H. Taft, S. L. Lewis, Jack Williams, S. H. Starr and W. G. Suttive, president of the Georgia Press association, Vice President Frank Curry, of the Tifton Board of Trade, president, and the board of trade and domestic science class.

The afternoon session was devoted to informal business discussions and selection for a place for the next meeting, which will be held at Douglas, on the third Monday in May. The September meeting will be held at Folkston, where President Robinson has promised the members all the bear they can catch and all the fish they can eat.

PLAN BIG EXPANSION OF ELECTRIC SERVICE

Approximately a billion dollars a year will be spent in the expansion and development of electric service in the United States, according to the plan which will be presented at the convention of the National Electric Light association, which will be held in New Orleans this week, stated Mr. H. Aylesworth, of New York, executive manager of the association, here Monday en route to the meeting.

The delegation that stopped over in the city Monday was entertained by the Georgia Railway and Power company, the feature of the day being a demonstration of the methods used by the power company in handling "hot" transmission lines without stopping the service.

BATEMAN FUNERAL SERVICES TODAY

Funeral services for Judge J. N. Bateman, who died of pneumonia Monday afternoon at his home, 5 East Third street, will be held Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock in the H. M. Patterson & Son chapel, Rev. C. J. Harrell, pastor of the First Methodist church, will officiate. Burial will be made in Oakland cemetery. Pallbearers will be George Westmoreland, L. W. Arnold, George L. Word, Eugene C. Clarke, Edmund W. Martin, Robert Lee Avery, Dewey Bateman, C. H. Bateman and Jerome Bateman.

Judge Bateman, who had been in ill health for the past three years, was 69 years old. He was a member of the Barnes lodge, No. 55, I. O. O. F., and was a former judge of the municipal court. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Annie McArthur Bateman, daughter of the late Thomas W. McArthur, a pioneer Atlantan.

MISSIONARY WILL SPEAK ON AFRICA

Rev. O. J. Orner, a missionary to Rhodesia, Africa, under the auspices of the American board of commissioners for foreign missions, will give a series of lectures at the First Congregational church, colored, Thursday night. He comes to Atlanta from Raleigh, N. C.

Boys' High Mandolin Orchestra And Banjo Club to Give Concert

Boys' High aggregation of mandolin artists, said to be the only complete mandolin orchestra in the south.

Atlantans are to be given the opportunity Friday night at Cable hall of hearing the only complete mandolin orchestra and complete banjo club in the south, when these organizations of the Boys' High school participate in a musical concert, which will also be marked by the appearance of the R. O. T. C. band, the Boys' High Glee club, and in addition a number of local solo artists widely known.

TO PUSH SPRING STREET VIADUCT RECOMMENDATION

T. C. Erwin, chairman of the city bond commission, and Walter G. Cooper, chairman of the viaduct committee of the commission, were surprised to learn Tuesday that the joint recommendation of those bodies and the council bridge committee that the engineering firm of Howard, Harrington & Ash, of Kansas City, be employed to build the Spring street viaduct, was not submitted and acted on at the council session Monday.

Councilman J. H. Olson, chairman of the bridge committee, was at the meeting, but did not ask that the recommendation be called up. He stated Tuesday that he had taken it for granted that officials of the commission and the council bridge committee had agreed on the recommendation, but he was disappointed to find that it had not been so.

Variety Promised By Emory Songsters In Appearance Here

Something unusual in the line of variety skits will be presented by the Emory University Glee club Friday night at the Wesley Memorial auditorium in its famous "Rag-Time Court" scene. This laughable burlesque gives the audience an insight into the little comedies and tragedies of life which are enacted almost every day in the courts of the city. It has proven one of the most popular numbers in the repertoire of the club for this season.

Another decidedly humorous musical number given by the Emory singers is "Grand Opera Up to Date." The instrumental interludes, played by the Emory university concert orchestra, include selections from "Faust," "Trovatore" and other popular operas. Tickets for the performance are now on sale at Wesley Memorial church and at Cable Piano company.

METHODISTS HOLD GATHERING HERE

An important discussion of lay activities of the North Georgia Conference, M. E. church, south, occurred Tuesday at the Piedmont hotel at a gathering of a number of prominent Methodists. Rush Burston, editor of The Lavonia Times, presided.

Dr. W. B. Beauchamp, lay leader for the M. E. church, south, and Dr. B. L. Russell, in charge of the department of evangelism, both of Nashville, were among those present.

Mother Burned Badly Attempting Rescue of Child

Baby Dies in Flames as Woman Is Overcome by Flames and Smoke.

Moultrie, Ga., January 16.—(Special.)—A year-old baby of Mr. and Mrs. Enoch Hiers, who reside 16 miles east of Moultrie, was burned to death this afternoon when fire destroyed the Hiers' home and Mrs. Hiers was burned seriously in a vain attempt to save the child, according to news received here.

The baby had been left asleep by its mother who went out into the yard. A short time later, she heard the flames roaring in the house. She rushed to the door to rescue the baby, but found that the fire had started in the room where it had been left in bed.

Several times she tried to fight her way through the flames, being badly burned before she was overcome. She and the baby were at home alone, Hiers being in Moultrie.

PLANS ARE PUSHED FOR INAUGURATION OF SERVICE DRIVE

Preparations are being made for the "five-way" social service opportunities drive, which will be inaugurated in Atlanta next month. Friends of the movement throughout the city are contributing every bit of office furniture and equipment that will be used in the office in the Arcade building.

Willie A. Milner, an Atlantan who has made a specialty of campaigns similar to the one to be opened in February, is in charge of the plans. Charles Lovett will be in charge of the office, which will open soon. Beneficiaries of the "five-way" drive will be the Boy Scouts, the Associated Charities, the Anti-Tuberculosis association, the Young Women's Christian association and the Travelers' Aid society.

Meeting Postponed.

Owing to the absence from the city of Internal Revenue Collector A. T. Rose, who was to have been the principal speaker, the meeting of the Atlanta chapter of the American Institute of Bankers, announced for Tuesday evening, has been postponed until Friday, January 27. Announcement of the postponement was made by C. E. Shepard, secretary of the local chapter.

DAVIS RENAMED HEAD OF TITLE COMPANY

Re-election of officers and directors and the declaring of a 3 per cent dividend on the capital stock marked the annual meeting of the directors and stockholders of the Atlanta Title and Trust company Tuesday afternoon.

The re-elected officers of the company are as follows: William J. Davis, president; John A. Murphy, vice president; J. H. Porter, vice president; Hanson W. Jones, title officer; George A. Campbell, secretary; Roy E. Calhoun and E. O. Kellum, assistant secretaries.

Directors who were chosen for another year were Forrest Adair, Harold Hirsch, J. Carroll Payne, James S. Floyd, William J. Davis, John E. Murphy, J. H. Porter and George A. Campbell.

Talks on Conditions. In commenting on business conditions generally, President Davis said: "While real estate has suffered from the depression noticeable in practically all other lines during the past year, from my observation of business conditions generally, I do not believe that the depression in the real estate market has been as marked as in a majority of other lines of business."

"It is a fact that real estate still is, and will continue to be, the basis of all credit. With this as a lasting condition, it is, of course, impossible for real estate to remain in a state of dormancy for any extended length of time."

New Department Gratifying. "Especially gratifying to the officers of the company has been the marked progress of our escrow department during the year just ended. This department of our business offers a class of service that has never before been attempted by any title or trust company south of Washington, and our clients are more and more availing themselves of this brand of our service."

"It is my prediction that 1922 will be a banner year in the history of real estate in Atlanta and vicinity, and particularly in new buildings, as the demand for vacant lots at this time is amazing."

Handkerchiefs were of any shape that fancy dictated until Marie Antoinette chanced to remark to Louis XVI. that it would be more convenient if only the square form were used. On January 2, 1785, the king of France issued an edict decreeing that "the length of handkerchiefs shall equal their width throughout the kingdom."

That Woodrow Wilson has come into his own, after a period in which some would have taken him from the lofty position which he has been given by the American people, is evidenced by the testimony of E. Walter Tripp, formerly connected with the Atlanta branch of the internal revenue department, lately returned from Washington.

Mr. Tripp described Monday night how the throng in the national capital greeted the former president with cheers as he spoke from his porch Sunday afternoon in response to the ovation given him.

"It was Friday or Saturday that I first noticed the people of the city placarding automobiles and street cars with Wilson posters," said Mr. Tripp. "On Sunday afternoon the people gathered at the National theater, the largest theaters in Washington, to celebrate Rally day, beginning the week in which the Woodrow Wilson foundation fund is to be raised."

"After the parade through the streets of Washington, headed by Samuel Gompers, head of the American Federation of Labor, the crowd gathered at Mr. Wilson's home to listen once more to the words of the great American. Wilson looked well. He appeared to be in better health than I have experienced in a long time."

Mr. Tripp went to Washington last Tuesday on business and returned Monday afternoon. He figures prominently as a prospective candidate in the coming race for congress, to take place in the early part of the summer.

TO GIVE SPECIAL TRAINING TO SINGERS

Special training will be given to members of the community chorus who desire it for the presentation of the opera, "Traviata," according to an announcement made by Signor E. Volpi, director of chorus. "Those who join now will be able to catch up with the class," said Signor Volpi Monday.

The regular meeting of the community chorus will be held Wednesday evening at 7:30 o'clock, in the town room of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce. All members have been urged to bring their score, in order to perfect the choral parts as early as possible.

WARMER WEATHER TODAY'S FORECAST

Warmer weather, with possible showers, is the prospect set forth in the weather forecast issued for today by the United States weather bureau station under C. F. von Herrmann, federal meteorologist, Tuesday.

Mr. von Herrmann said that in all probability the rain would not be plentiful. More or less cloudy weather prevails through the south, according to the weather report. With the melting of the snows in the more northern and easterly sections, the temperature will rise somewhat in Georgia.

Atlanta Women Spontaneous In Woodrow Wilson Faith

The rallying of woman's faith to the Woodrow Wilson foundation has been shining light in the two days' progress of Atlanta's campaign.

Women versed in public work, and women whose activities have been only to those who come into direct association with them in their work; the experienced club woman, the retiring church worker, the business woman with little leisure for campaigning—all have come forward.

They have given of their money, and more significant still, they have stationed themselves downtown to receive subscriptions. Finally when asked to express themselves through the press, they have not had to study what they would say.

So keen is their feeling, that expression is spontaneous. A few are quoted as follows:

"It is not just a memorial to Woodrow Wilson which the American people have the opportunity to establish this week in the Woodrow Wilson foundation; it is not the fund which is the important thing. But what is really significant is the expression which people's contributions will mean of their belief that brotherly love and peace is possible in place of strife and war."

Mrs. Hinman Enthusiastic.

The speaker was Mrs. Henry A. Hinman. Receiving contributions downtown during Wilson hour on Monday, she is continuing her effort with a conviction in her own mind of the scope and meaning of the work which is making the people think with whom she comes in contact, and is adding to the fund she is daily turning into headquarters.

"It is numbers that is needed in contributions to the fund," Mrs. Hinman emphasizes.

"The world is watching us closely this week, more closely than our own people realize, and if the American people in great numbers express in concrete form their belief in the possibilities of Mr. Wilson's so-called idealism, it will be an encouragement to all the world."

"It is not just a league of nations which we will thus profess to believe in, but nations which can live together in peace and mutual understanding, in place of suspicion and strife."

An Educational Purpose.

Miss Laura Smith believes that while the accusation may be true that Woodrow Wilson's head was in the clouds of idealism, yet his feet were on the solid earth of practical possibilities.

"I think women are showing a far-sighted wisdom," said Miss Smith, "in their faith in the Wilson ideals and their enthusiasm over the foundation. They see the economic as well as the idealistic purpose, in their principles. When we have international friendship and permanent peace, then, and only then, can the revenues of our nation, and all nations, go into the constructive channels. Education, in its broadest sense, will have a far-reaching effect. The money that is now going in the ways of destruction will be diverted to a proper use, and that proportion, 93 per cent of our revenues for the instruments of war, 7 per cent for instruments of peace, will be no longer an embarrassment to the term civilization."

"The foundation itself is primarily educational, since its purpose is to reward, and thus to exploit, the virtue of peace and the valor of the peace-maker."

"These are some of the reasons why women are regarding it as a real privilege to contribute to the Woodrow Wilson foundation and to work for it."

Victory Over Defeat.

The expression of Mrs. William A. Wright dates her patriotism as far back as the confederacy, and has seen the apparent defeat and the victory over defeat of more than one great figure in history.

"Associated in my mind for months," says Mrs. Wright, "has been the confederacy, Jefferson Davis, and the world war."

"In the annals of history I can recall no man who has suffered as these two suffered for others. The monument which the confederacy erected, sided by the southern people, are today building at Fairview, Ky., in honor of Jefferson Davis, cannot gladden his heart. But this monument, the Woodrow Wilson foundation, will give happiness to Woodrow Wilson, gladdening a heart which has been bowed down in sorrow for others. Let us go forward in this great work, never lagging for a moment."

Women's Faith.

"It is a glorious thing," said Mrs. Bolling Jones, "that the world's greatest statesman, once so reproached, is coming into his own. Lloyd George, considered the only other man in Woodrow Wilson's category. The whole world is coming round to the Woodrow Wilson principles, even those who do not admit it. The women have had the faith in the Wilson ideal, and I am glad to see that they are showing their light."

Miss Florence Downs, division cashier, traffic department, American Telephone and Telegraph company, has been one of the most efficient workers among the group of women just quoted. Miss Downs' confidence in Woodrow Wilson's principles and his policies has concrete expression in two books which she has compiled, which are made up of clippings from newspapers, magazines and books on Woodrow Wilson and his work, while president of the United States.

"At her station in the Fourth National Bank building, during Woodrow Wilson hour alone, $500 or $400 was brought to her by acquaintances who knew and had consistent admiration for Mr. Wilson, and had seen her books."

Asked for a statement concerning her consistent admiration for Woodrow Wilson and what she stands for, Miss Downs said:

"The establishment of a Woodrow Wilson foundation, which is uppermost in the minds and hearts of the American people this week, calls for the expressed gratitude of a grateful people, who believe in and cherish the ideals and life of Woodrow Wilson to make the world safe for democracy. The generations are yet unborn which will arise and call him blessed, as history records the mighty thought of loving service he has given—not to the chosen few, but to the world at large, that it might realize its freedom from bondage."

Flowers to the Living.

Mrs. Robert T. Daniel said: "This is a fitting memorial to a man who still lives and who, as the years go by, will be more and more understood. I am glad I live in an age when we delight to place immortals at the feet of the living, and to record history while he still smiles and understands the sincerity of purpose back of the ideal being made to have a Woodrow Wilson foundation memorial."

"Contributions so far received towards the Woodrow Wilson foundation," said Mrs. T. T. Stevens, chairman of the women's committee, "are satisfactory when it is realized that hundreds gave in small sums, and that people were expected to bring their money to headquarters voluntarily, although they have been trained to have soliciting committees come to them."

"The women have proved in splendid fashion their belief in the foundation movement, and they are working earnestly."

Headquarters will be maintained at Piedmont hotel, between 10 and 4 o'clock each day, and subscribers may give in their contributions to the ladies in charge there, or they may send them at any time to the foundation, The Journal or to R. C. Clay, cashier, Fulton National bank.

Methodist Women Called For Hospital Equipment

More than 55,000 women, which includes every Methodist woman in the North and South Georgia conferences, are to be enrolled during the next few weeks in the greatest church organization the south has ever known, if plans mature as launched at an enthusiastic meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Wesley Memorial church, held in Wesley Memorial church Tuesday afternoon.

Every woman in the church is to be given an opportunity to enroll and, by doing so, have a part in equipping the great new Wesley Memorial hospital now being constructed on the Emory university campus.

Every church is to compete against every other church in the district; every district against every other district. The sentiment as expressed at the meeting Tuesday is that the auxiliary be made necessary to the fact that no Methodist woman can overlook an opportunity to join.

Mrs. Arkwright Presides.

The meeting Tuesday, which was presided over by Mrs. Preston Arkwright, chairman of the central committee, was one of the most enthusiastic gatherings Atlanta has ever known. It developed, among other things, that the equipment of the new hospital is absolutely dependent upon the woman's auxiliary and that, through nominal contributions of the part of every woman, it will be possible not only to furnish the necessary equipment, but also, from year to year, pay for the bed linen and pantry necessities.

Tuesday's meeting was addressed by Mrs. Arkwright, Asa G. Candler, chairman of the board of trustees; Walk White, secretary; Mrs. Plato Durham, chairman of the executive committee; Miss Jessie Duncan, assistant superintendent of the nurses' school, and others.

The Atlanta campaign was launched with the appointment of leaders in every church in the city. Similar organizations will begin activities immediately with the appointment of a "key woman" by the presiding elder of each district. Each key woman will associate her staff of workers, and it is expected that within a comparatively short time every woman in the church will be invited to enroll, paying $1 for a year's membership.

"I can not think of a more appealing call to the women of Georgia," said Mrs. Arkwright. "Membership in this auxiliary means that every woman who joins has held out a helping hand to suffering humanity; has become a factor in the great work of mercy. Certainly no one can fail to enroll."

Membership Fee $1.

It was Mrs. Candler's speech that emphasized the necessity of every woman enrolling. He frankly stated that the hospital equipment depended Robert Gregg.

Voters League To Sponsor Big Luncheon

The Voters' league held the weekly luncheon Tuesday at the Chamber of Commerce cafe. Mrs. Jack Branch, Mrs. A. R. Brittain and Mrs. E. A. Pierce were among the district chairmen that spoke on organization of districts. Miss Raoul discussed the new charter proposed by Edgar Watkins. Mrs. Emily C. McDougald gave briefly the main points of the new charter recently adopted in Columbus, Ga., and spoke of the efficient city administrator appointed by the council and mentioned that he was a man who had experience in municipal work in other parts of the country. Invitation is extended to any men who are interested to attend this luncheon.

Mrs. J. T. Stephenson presided and announced that next Tuesday at the usual hour, which is 12:30 o'clock, Edgar Watkins would speak on his charter. In view of the fact that there would be an exceptionally large attendance, Mrs. Stephenson said that the luncheon would be held upstairs in the town room of the chamber of commerce and that it would be necessary for those attending to make reservations by telephoning her at Hemlock 1394-W. Twenty-nine reservations have already been made, and as it will be impossible to seat more than one hundred, all who care to attend are urged to reserve seats at once.

Mrs. Hinman Is Hostess at Informal Tea

Mrs. Thomas P. Hinman entertained the members of the surgical dressing committee of the Crippled Children's hospital, of which she has just been elected to the chairmanship, and succeeds Mrs. Guy Mitchell, who built up and led one of the most valuable committees connected with the woman's auxiliary of the hospital.

Each Monday morning at 10 o'clock Mrs. Hinman meets with the members and surgical dressings are made until 1 o'clock. Mrs. Hinman was a faithful worker in this department of the American Red Cross for Atlanta, and worked during the entire period of the war, before and after America entered the conflict. She served as head of this work during the last nine months of the war.

The tea table was covered with an exquisite lace cloth, and adorning the center was a bowl of Bohemian glass, holding pink roses and narcissi. Four candlesticks holding blue unshaded candles, alternated with composites filled with pink bon bons, encircled the central decoration. Tea was poured by Miss Katharine Hand.

Mrs. Hinman's guests were Mrs. Guy Mitchell, Mrs. J. M. Tull, Mrs. George Howard, Mrs. Carnay, Mrs. Ludwig, Mrs. Palmer, Mrs. S. C. Dinkins, Mrs. John G. Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

EVEN THINGS NEED A REST SOMETIMES

What wonders a little change will do in making one see the familiar thing with a new eye! Here is a queer example of that familiar truth. I have just started again to carry a small traveling bag which I put on the shelf some years ago. I had carried the bag then for some years, and it had reached that stage when it seemed to me too shabby and out of date to carry any longer. So I bought me a new bag—a cheaper one, but beautiful to me then because it was new.

Now I have worn out that bag, and before buying a new one I looked over the old one which I had placed on the shelf and decided that it really didn't look half bad after all. So I had it freshened up a bit and have started carrying it again. And I really feel quite satisfied with it. And yet I remember that when I put it away and bought the new one, it seemed to me that I would rather stay at home than go on a journey with that old thing again.

Evidently its long rest on the shelf in the back of my closet did that bag a lot of good, by proxy. That is, it rested my eyes and made them see a different bag from the one they put away.

A friend of mine says the same thing often happens to her with a hat or a suit. She puts it away in the spring with the feeling that she cannot possibly wear it again. Then she wears something different all summer, and when she turns from a summer hat or suit of which she has gotten equally tired of, a hat or a suit she has not seen for some months, she is quite delighted with the garment that looked so impossible when she put it away.

Write Yourself an Essay.

It seems to me that this truth that our eyes need a rest from looking at any one object too long and can come back and find new beauty and charm in anything they have not seen for a while, has a very obvious application. I think I will leave it to you to make the application.

You can write yourself an article on that subject. And as you have already guessed, the heading is "Vacations From Each Other for Husbands and Wives."

Tomorrow—The Difficult Art of Being a Successful Grandmother.

Domestic Science Class Luncheon. Miss Jessie Muse, principal, and Miss Cone, domestic science head of the Girls' High School, will demonstrate a luncheon for the mothers of the class of St. Paul's M. E. church, in the classroom of the church, on Friday afternoon, January 27.

The preparation of the luncheon will be demonstrated by members of the class under the direction of Miss Muse and Miss Cone. Little booklets will give the menu and the recipes and these booklets will have on the covers pictures of the young girls who will demonstrate the preparation of this luncheon.

Miss Parker To Entertain.

Miss Josephine Parker will entertain the members of the Kirkwood Rook club Friday afternoon at her home on Kirkwood road. The members include Mrs. Frank Nash, Mrs. L. J. Her host insisted on taking her over the house, when she professed unbounded admiration for its beauties. As she accompanied him through the house, she felt that she had gained another step in her progress toward the goal. For until he was showing her his home, with such minutiae of detail it was not that she was regarded as a prospective member of the family.

When the time arrived for Vic to drive her back to town, she thanked her host prettily for her charming evening, and turned to Mrs. Barstowe with just the right shade of formality.

"So glad you could come," murmured the older woman politely, her cold gray eyes absolutely devoid of expression.

No mention of another meeting, no reference to the engagement! Merely the formal speeding of a chance guest!

There were angry tears in Jeanne's eyes as she got into the limousine for the return trip to town.

It was the first time in her adventurous career since she had come to New York that she had met with a deliberate rebuff. Until the night, when one had snubbed her. And to think that, of all people, the first to do so should be the mother of her fiancé!

She bit her lip to keep back the tears she had made its way through the park and out of the gateway into the motor highway. She was determined that Vic should not guess her humiliation, she felt somehow that it would lower her in his eyes if she admitted that she had been routed.

If she could remain serenely indifferent to the affront upon her by his mother, she would have supremacy, and his attitude would be one of respect toward his parent.

She was now, she had not been snubbed before. It was because she had been clever enough to play her game with men and not with women. Men were blinded by her beauty and charm, and men are charitable, usually. The women she met were those to whom she was not a novelty. They were those who had been snubbed by her. Had they dared to snub her, appearing unheeded and unavowed for they would have lost favor with the men whose attentions they courted.

"Tired, dear?" Barstowe drew her to his side, bending his head to look into her eyes.

She averted them, lest the glimmer of tears be visible in the light that illuminated the car occasionally as they flashed along the road.

"A little," she admitted. "I've had a busy day." But it was a charming party, wasn't it? What a regal mother and your fiancé!

There is a perfect dear! I was ever so interested in his splendid collection!" Barstowe laughed with a note of relief. She wondered if he had feared that she would upbraid him for her cool reception.

"Oh, the family's all right! A little stiff until you get to know them. If dad's hobby is prints, mother's is the family tree, which she knows each twig and acorn, and she belongs to every club in the country which promotes the study of the history of antiquity."

"Are you an ancestor fan, too?" inquired Jeanne.

"Yes," he laughed. "I think most family closets need fumigation instead of cultivation."

"I wonder if your mother would be interested in my family tree?" mused Jeanne. "Like you, I never give a thought to my ancestors, but I had some of the history of my country."

He took her up eagerly. "I say, that's great! You must talk to mother about them. She'll be enthusiastic. Can't you manage to lunch with us tomorrow? Mother's coming in to town, and I asked her to meet me at the Ritz."

Jeanne was too clever to rush matters. Besides, she needed time to prune that family tree until its critical genealogy was Barstowe's criticism. She believed it was the wisest to call in the services of an expert genealogist, in view of the older woman's knowledge of such matters.

"Thank you, but I couldn't possibly make it," she declined Barstowe's invitation. "I have a busy day tomorrow. So I must leave you to present my apologies to your mother."

"But I want you to go with me to Tiffany's tomorrow about the ring," he insisted. "and you don't suppose for one instant that I am going to let the day go by without seeing you, do you?"

She shook her head, smilingly. "Some other day will do for the ring. Remember, I said that I would not marry you if your family objected, and you haven't secured their consent yet."

"But I shall!" he insisted confidently. "Of course, it was rather a farce springing it on them the way to-night. But you'll see. They're come across all right!"

Jeanne's smile was doubtful, and Barstowe suddenly reached over and drew her into his arms, crushing her against his breast.

"You don't think all the objections in the world would make any difference," he murmured.

Who's Who in the Story.

Jeanne Ware, known in the little town whence she came as plain Jane Dare, has set herself up in New York as a wealthy woman in the hope of snaring a rich husband. In this effort she is making use of Richard Canby, well-known man-about-town. Canby invites Jeanne to a dinner together with Mrs. Adele Parkinson, a widow and former flame of his. At dinner she meets

Vic Barstowe, heir to the reported millions, who shows signs of infatuation with her.

Signor Bonicetti, a famous violinist, asks only to serve Jeanne, and she uses him as a drawing card to her tea party.

Adele foils Victor Barstowe's attempt to linger for a tete-a-tete with Jeanne.

As Jeanne is starting for a dinner engagement, Henry Harrison telephones.

He informs Jeanne that he can borrow nothing on her worthless land.

Selby North, gossiping, elderly bachelor, tells Jeanne of Barstowe's many flirtations.

Harrison comes to breakfast to arrange for the transfer of property, and meets Adele Parkinson, to whom Jeanne presents him as a business acquaintance.

Canby offers a "market tip" as a means for Jeanne to make some money.

She arranges the party so that she drives to the Forbes' in Barstowe's car and Jeanne goes ahead with a man named Farnham.

At the dance that night Jeanne using indifference to bait Barstowe, succeeds in angering him.

She learns that Vera is a formidable rival, being a lifelong acquaintance much favored by Barstowe's family because of her blue-blooded ancestry.

She consents to dine with the Barstowes, to whom Vic presents her as his fiancée.

But she meets with a chilly reception.

Installment No. 29. Climbing a Pedestal.

Vera Dayton's expression when she heard Victor Barstowe address Jeanne as "darling" was indescribable.

Her glance flashed, lightning-like, first to Jeanne, then back to Barstowe again. But neither of the young people showed the slightest perturbation or embarrassment. It was obviously not a slip of the tongue, Vera decided. Barstowe had actually meant to address Jeanne affectionately, and she received it as one long accustomed to such phrases.

Barstowe gave no evidence of noting Vera's amazement. He bent over Jeanne.

"Dad wants to show you his collection. May I take you to him?" Jeanne rose instantly, and with a murmured excuse to Vera Dayton, moved away on Barstowe's arm.

"You mustn't let Dad monopolize you or tire you," laughed Vic. "He's nutty on the subject of his collection, and you're a darling to encourage him. It's the direct road to Dad heart," he added.

Jeanne smiled, but made no comment. Neither of them made any reference to the Barstowe family's reception of the news of their engagement. Jeanne felt that it would be unkind for her to admit that she had noted the decided coldness, and she was confident that Vic would respect her pride too much to open the subject.

When inevitably the time arrived for such a discussion, she had determined to take refuge in quiet dignity, not unaided with her. She would give the impression that the objections of the Barstowe family were humiliating to her family pride and breeding, and trust to luck that this attitude would disarm them of any suspicion that she was a fortune hunter.

She spent more than an hour in Barstowe's study, inspecting the marvelous collections, listening with flattering attention to his expansive discourse on subjects dear to his heart. She knew that she was winning in that quarter, but Barstowe's mother presented the unknown factor.

Her host insisted on taking her over the house, when she professed unbounded admiration for its beauties. As she accompanied him through the house, she felt that she had gained another step in her progress toward the goal. For until he was showing her his home, with such minutiae of detail it was not that she was regarded as a prospective member of the family.

"You don't mean that!" he said quietly. "I wouldn't marry any man without his parents' approval. It would be a constant source of unhappiness and sacrifice to him," she announced righteously. "You wonderful woman!" breathed Barstowe, laying his face in her fragrant palms. "How good and how understanding you are! I could fall down and worship you!"

Atlanta Artist Paints Portrait Of Art Authority

A distinction of real significance coming to an Atlanta woman was the selection by Mrs. Rose V. S. Berry, of Berkeley, Cal., an art authority of national recognition, of Miss Kate Edwards, an Atlanta artist, to do her portrait.

Because of Mrs. Berry's office as chairman of the department of fine arts of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, and because of her work as a professional lecturer and teacher, it is necessary that her portrait should frequently appear in magazines and newspapers, as a part of the publicity of the general federation, and of Mrs. Berry's professional work.

"I have been looking for the kind of a portrait which would be a likeness," said Mrs. Berry, during her recent visit in Atlanta, "and which would be pleasing enough in the character of the portrait itself to be of value in publicity."

She found it here in Atlanta, in your Miss Edwards' white pastels. It seems to me a most expressive portrait, and I like the medium.

"I have found that the pastel photographs successfully, too, and that is a practical detail which is no inconceivable item in the work to which I would put the portrait."

Mrs. Berry, who had expected to do a week-end visit on Sunday, remained over Monday in order to give Miss Edwards a sitting, and so sympathetic a subject did Mrs. Berry prove, that the artist was enabled to complete the portrait at once, and it was a finished product by Tuesday.

Community Chorus To Meet Wednesday Night.

The regular meeting of the community chorus will be held this evening at 7:30 o'clock in the town room of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce. All members are requested to bring "Travlers" score. E. Volpi, conductor, announces that there is still opportunity to join the chorus as special training will be given those who join now to enable them to catch up with the class.

Macon Observes Dry Anniversary.

Macon, Ga., January 17.—(Special.)—Dr. W. F. Quillian, president of Wesleyan college, delivered a scholarly address at the celebration of the second anniversary of national constitutional prohibition. The regular meeting of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, Friday afternoon, in the spacious home of Mrs. L. McKenney, on Vineville avenue, which was filled by the large gathering of white ribboners, and their friends.

Talks were made by Mrs. August Burghard, state W. C. T. U. director of publicity, and Mrs. D. S. Wagon, the Sixth District W. C. T. U. president. Mrs. Harry Curtis read the Temperance Crusade Psalm, 146, and Mrs. George Watson offered prayer. Miss Lois Thomas sang "America, the Beautiful," accompanied by Mrs. W. B. Dickenworth.

"Bible Reasons for the Eighteenth Amendment" were impressively given by members of the national prohibition guards, led by Mrs. D. A. Warlick.

Mrs. Hobson Is Honored.

Mrs. M. Haskins Hobson, of Richmond, Va., who is the guest of her daughter, Mrs. Macon Hobson, was complimented Tuesday afternoon with a matinee party, at which Mrs. Paul D. Hobson was the guest of honor.

The guests included Mrs. Haskins Hobson, Mrs. W. E. Davidson, Mrs. H. I. Walters and Mrs. Macon Hobson.

Miss De Rake To Wed Mr. Lohse.

Mr. and Mrs. James De Rake, of Baltimore, Md., announce the engagement of their daughter, Lucille, to William Lohse, of San Francisco, Cal., the marriage to take place February 18.

This announcement is one of interest to a large circle of friends among the debutante set of last season and the young married society set. Miss De Rake is the niece of Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Burr, and was their house guest last Christmas a year ago, and she was the guest of honor at many parties, her charm of manner won for her many friends. She is a talented musician, having been a student of the violin a number of years at the Peabody conservatory, under Frank C. Borchstein.

Mr. Lohse is the eldest son of the late William Lohse, Sr., and Mrs. Lohse, of San Francisco. He is connected with the California Packing corporation, of that city, where they will make their home.

Panhellenic Council Dance.

The Panhellenic council of the Tech High school will give a dance Thursday evening at Garber hall, on Peachtree street.

The fraternities composing this council are the S. P. M., the O. D. P. and the T. D. T. The chaperones will be Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Funk, Mr. and Mrs. Sh. W. Hastings, W. O. Cheney and T. C. Kimball. Turner's Novelty orchestra will furnish the music.

Program Announced For Alliance Francaise.

At the meeting of the Alliance Francaise to be held Thursday at 8:30 o'clock, at assembly hall of the Carnegie library, Madame Sliffer will resume the interesting play of Francoise de Curel, "Le Repas de Loin," and read the third act. The two preceding acts have been very much appreciated.

As usual, the meeting will begin promptly on time.

The rehearsals of the play, "Le Repas de Loin," to be given on the 8th of February by the Cercle Dramatique of the Alliance Francaise, promise a great success.

Dance at Fraternity School.

The Fraternity Dancing school over normally will be the scene of a delightful dance this evening, beginning promptly at 9 o'clock.

BEAUTIFUL CHATS

There is a widely printed ad which informs us somewhat lugubriously that nine people out of every ten are going to get porphyria some day if they don't watch out. The worst part of the ad is that it's quite true. We all seem to take our teeth for granted until a toothache or a bleeding gum warns us that something has to be done immediately.

It is also probably true, as another widely printed and declared, that a clean tooth never decays. The teeth that the teeth should be brushed twice every day in such a manner as to take the film from them and to get out every particle of food that hides between them. The teeth should be brushed up and down from the gums to the ends with a moderately stiff brush and a generous amount of good tooth paste. The brush should be over the gum a trifle, so that bristles will stimulate and make gums healthier.

The English have a terrible habit of having their teeth pulled out by the roots. They will stimulate and make gums healthier. The English have a terrible habit of having their teeth pulled out by the roots. They will stimulate and make gums healthier.

This talk is only a suggestion. Daily care of the teeth—the brush that should come after breakfast and before bedtime; the rinsing with an antiseptic if there is any tendency to acid mouth; the use of a soft wool toothpick (in privacy) to remove food lodged between the teeth. Another day I want to talk about the sort of cleaning that saves teeth with a tendency toward pyorrhea.

S. C. L.—The mixture of rose water and glycerine is rarely used, in fact as it irritates most skins, it is excellent for the hands.

Babe—If your face is too thin to look like a duck with a good crowd of Goldie—As your hair is Auburn, it can easily darken the white eyebrows by using henna. If you prefer have them brown, there is a color made from walnut hulls that will stain the hair. This should be applied skillfully from the point of fine brush as it will also stain skin.

Jean—The course powder that lies in the bottom of the Pilocarpus tonic is the sulphur. Always shake mixture before using it.

Tomorrow—Talking Through the Nose.

All inquiries addressed to M. Forbes in care of the "Beat Chats" department will be answered in these columns in their own words. This requires considerable time, however, owing to the great number received. So if a personal quicker reply is desired, a stamped and self-addressed envelope must be enclosed with the question.—Editor.

DRESS BY ANNE RITTENHOUSE

The Knitted Garments for Spring. France is full of the idea of knitted garments for the spring. The dressmakers are preparing them in their collections to be shown in Paris to the American buyers. This is a real triumph for the knitted garment. It is a triumph for the knitted garment. It is a triumph for the knitted garment.

It was not possible for England and France to keep placing importance upon the new kind of knitted clothes their smart women were wearing without the trade in America finally taking notice and trying to bring these shores the dashing apparel that Americans desired. It is a temptation to ask why the knitted overblouses and tailored suits were not sooner made a feature of our exhibitions here. There must be a good reason, but when one has to answer that question every day, one would like to know what to answer. The thin blouse, beaded or braided, or finished with dangling ends or bells was offered by shops whenever one asked for overblouses. In the specialty shops where individual blouses were built to order there were many models in heavy crepe and light crepe, some with a group of pin tucks, or the dash of embroidery on the end of a string, the heavy elastic sport jumper, the kind of thing one bought in Europe for the last year, was lacking. Possibly this spring the situation will be changed for the early exhibitions include French knitted suits and skirts with jumper blouses. As early as the first week in December the expensive knitted costumes for Palm Beach, Georgia, and Aiken, South Carolina, were in full of the idea of knitted garments for the spring. The dressmakers are preparing them in their collections to be shown in Paris to the American buyers. This is a real triumph for the knitted garment. It is a triumph for the knitted garment. Glee Club Sponsor

MISS ALICE STEWART

Miss Alice Stewart has been chosen sponsor for the Glee club of the Boys' High school. The club together with the other musical organizations of the school will present a musical Friday evening at Cable hall at 8:15 o'clock, which promises to be exceptionally good. A marked interest has been manifested at the school in development of the boys in musical lines.

The boys of the school and Mrs. Walter Bedard, who is chairman of the musical committee of the Parent-Teacher association, are working hard to finance their organization and proceeds of this musical will go to furnish equipment needed. A splendid program will be rendered by orchestra, R. O. T. C. band, of Boys' High school, Mandolin club

Dance at Roseland Hall.

A dance will be given Tuesday evening January 24, at Roseland hall, corner Peachtree and Cain streets, sponsored by Henry Jenkins, Tom Laird, George Simons and P. E. Church.

An enjoyable feature of this dance is the excellent music by Clare's celebrated orchestra, one of the most popular in the city.

A cordial invitation is extended the members and friends of all the recognized dancing clubs of the city.

Dancing will be from 8:30 to 11:30 o'clock. Admission by card only.

Japanese Music

For Drama League.

The samisen, a queer little three-stringed sort of harp, the cokin, and Japanese drums and traps are among the strange eastern musical instruments that are to be heard by the Drama league next Friday. The performers on these odd instruments are two native Japanese artists, Mr. and Mrs. Michitaro Ongawa, who give a performance before the Drama league on Friday afternoon at 8:30 o'clock, in Eggleston hall.

Songs will be sung to the weird accompaniment of these instruments, dances will be given, and a modern and Glee club, assisted by several of Atlanta's best known artists. Enrico Leide, orchestra leader at the Howard theater, will play on the cello, Mrs. Nellie Nix Edwards and Fretton H. Epps will sing. Another interesting feature of the concert is a trio of Italian harp, mandolin and piano, which will be given by Mr. and Mrs. William Butt Griffith and Mrs. Walter Bedard.

This program will be augmented by the playlet, "Nevertheless," by Stuart Walker, under the auspices of the Dramatic Club of Boys' High school, of which Mr. Martin is head. The participants are Miss Sarah White, of Girls' High school, loaned by courtesy of Miss Muse; Joel Hunter, Jr., and Marion Camp, who are being coached by Miss Ransom Wright, complimentary to the school.

Japanese play, "The Fox Woman," will be played with settings, costumes and a cast of five characters. The program covers the drama, the music, the dance, and characteristic legends that have made Japan famous to beauty lovers, and not modern garbed theatrical versions, but folk-tales and folk-music as they are heard in the cherry-blossom land.

All who are interested in Japanese literature, Japanese art, and Japanese drama, as well as lovers of charming entertainment and picturesque beauty, are invited to be present to hear the Ongawas, the price of the tickets, to league members and non-members alike, being $1.

In Memory Of Mrs. McLendon.

The Atlanta Frances Willard Woman's Christian Temperance union and the Atlanta Equal Suffrage association will unite in placing a program tablet in the chapel in honor of the late Mrs. Mary McLendon, whose life was spent in good works for her state, and who was the long-time president of these two organizations.

This decision was reached at a meeting of the Frances Willard W. C. T. U. in the home of the newly-selected president, Mrs. K. L. Reeves, 40 Garfield place.

The union pledged $100 to be raised by donations of members and friends, which may be sent to Mrs. Reeves, or to the treasurer, Mrs. Amelia Woodall, 387 East North avenue.

A prominent Atlanta gentleman, an honorary member of the union, headed the list with a check for $50. The proceeds from the sale of a life sketch of Mrs. McLendon, published as a brochure, containing her picture, will be used to swell the memorial fund.

Buffet Luncheon For Miss Baldwin.

Miss Elodia Baldwin, a bride-elect, was honor guest at the buffet luncheon given yesterday by Miss Ada Teabaut, at her home on North avenue.

Potted plants, palms and ferns were in the dining room, the table was lace-covered, and was graced by a miniature bride wearing a wedding gown of real lace fashioned over Duchess satin, and trimmed with tiny seed pearls. A flowing veil of white tulle completed the costume. The bride was placed on a mound of Ophelia roses edged with valley lilies. At either end of the table was a French basket, filled with Ophelia roses and tied with yellow tulle, and placed at intervals were small Tiffany baskets filled with valley lilies which alternated with silver candlesticks holding yellow unshaded tapers.

Miss Teabaut, received her guests wearing a gown of pink tulle. She was assisted in entertaining by her mother, Mrs. D. B. Teabaut, who was gowned in black Spanish lace fashioned over green satin, and her sister, Mrs. William Candler, who wore a gown of apricot georgette heavily beaded.

Miss Baldwin wore a becoming costume of blue beaded georgette crepe.

Agnes Scott Alumnae Is Entertained.

In compliment to the members of the Agnes Scott Alumnae association, Mrs. Charles Loridan entertained Tuesday afternoon at her home on Fifteenth street.

A discussion of the alumnae house on the Agnes Scott college campus followed the business meeting. Miss Elizabeth Marsh was in charge of the musical program, and the afternoon was closed with a social cup of tea.

Westminster Church Oyster Supper.

The Ladies' Aid society of Westminster Presbyterian church will have an oyster supper Thursday.

Stews will be 50 cents, fried oysters will be 75 cents.

This will be in the front part of the new church from 6:30 to 8:30 o'clock.

Musical will be furnished by an orchestra.

The public is cordially invited.

Called Meeting of Fulton Chapter, U. D. C.

Fulton chapter, U. D. C., will have a called meeting this afternoon at 3 o'clock in Edison hall.

The president requests all members to be present as business of importance is to be brought before the chapter.

Treasurer will be present to collect 1922 dues.

At Villa Kalamia.

Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Austell gave a beautiful dinner last night at their home, Villa Kalamia, in honor of their son, Wickliffe Gray, of New York.

Covers were laid for twelve, and the table decoration was tasteful and unusual.

In the center was a Della Robbia bowl filled with rich fruits. Pink roses were scattered over the Cluny lace table cover, and pink candles unshaded burned in silver candlesticks.

Mrs. Gray wore an elegant costume of black lace over gray satin.

In the party were Mr. Gray, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Speer, Dr. and Mrs. Stephen Barnett, Mr. and Mrs. E. Rivers, Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Carsons, Mrs. Albert E. Thornton.

HOW TO SOLVE THE PUZZLE

How many visible objects in the above picture start with the letter "S"? Can you find them all? There are "sheep," "sun," "sack," etc. Nothing is hidden. It is not necessary to use a reading glass or microscope, turn the picture upside down or sideways, to find the objects. You do not have to guess. Just use your thinker. Write the "S-words" you find, plainly on a sheet of paper and when your list is completed, send it to the puzzle manager. Fifteen cash prizes will be awarded for the fifteen best lists of "S-words" submitted. The answer having the largest and nearest correct list of visible objects shown in the picture, starting with the letter "S" will be awarded first prize, second best, second prize, etc.

$1,500.00

For a Few Spare Moments of Your Time

You do not have to be a subscriber to The Constitution to win a $1,500.00 prize, or any of the other fourteen big rewards. Anyone, both subscribers and non-subscribers, may take part and try for the big prizes.

If your list of "S-words" is awarded FIRST prize by the judges, you will win $50.00, but if you would like to win more than $50.00, we are making the following special offer, whereby you can win "BIG CASH PRIZES" by sending in ONE or TWO subscriptions.

HERE'S HOW: If your answer to the "S-Word" Picture Puzzle wins FIRST prize, and you have sent in ONE six months' subscription to The Atlanta Constitution at $5.00, you will receive $500.00 instead of only $50.00; Second prize, $350.00; Third prize, $350.00, etc. (See second column of figures in prize list.)

OR, if your answer wins FIRST prize, and you have sent in TWO six months' subscriptions to The Atlanta Constitution at $5.00 each, or ONE yearly subscription to The Constitution at $9.50, you will receive $1,500.00 in place of only $50.00; Second prize, $1,000.00; Third prize, $1,000.00, etc. (See third column of figures in prize list.)

It takes but two six-month subscriptions at $5.00 each, or ONE yearly subscription at $9.50 (either new or renewal) to qualify for the big $1,500.00 prize, or the second and third $1,000.00 prizes. Absolutely that is all the subscriptions required. You can do this with very little effort. Your own subscription can count.

—Observe These Rules—

1. Any man, woman, girl or boy who is not an employee of The Atlanta Constitution, or a member of an employee's family, may submit an answer. It costs nothing to try.
2. All answers must be mailed by January 21, 1922.
3. Answers should be written on one side of the paper, only, and each word numbered consecutively, 1, 2, 3, etc. Do not put more than one "S-word" with each number. Write your full name and address on each page in the upper right-hand corner. If you desire to write anything else, use a separate sheet.
4. Only words found in the English dictionary will be counted. Do not use hyphenated, compound or obsolete words. Use either the singular or plural, but where the plural is used, the singular cannot be counted and vice versa.
5. Words of the same spelling can be used only once, even though used to designate different objects. The same object can be named only once; however, any visible part of the object may also be named.
6. The person sending in the largest and nearest correct list of "S-words" will win first prize, etc. Neatness, style

- and handwriting have no bearing upon deciding the winners.
7. Candidates may co-operate in answering the puzzle, but only one prize will be awarded to any one household; nor will prizes be awarded to more than one of any group outside of the family, where two or more have been working together.
8. In the event of a tie for any prize offered the full amount of such prize will be paid to each tied participant.
9. All answers will receive the same consideration; regardless of whether or not a subscription for The Atlanta Constitution is sent in.
10. There will be three independent judges, having no connection with The Constitution, who will judge the answers submitted and award the prizes at the end of the puzzle game and participants agree to accept the decision of the judges as final and conclusive.
11. The judges will meet right after the close, and the announcement of the prize-winners and correct list of words will be published in The Constitution just as quickly thereafter as possible.

ONE-REEL YARNS

THE FRIENDS OF FELICE.

Felice was sitting out in front talking to an organ grinder.

"Felice!" called her mother. "I don't know whatever I'll do with that girl," she fretted. "She has such low tastes. She's always picking up urchins or beggars. She talks to the chauffeur and the gardener as if they were chums of hers. She actually cried when her father fired that chauffeur when he found he was a radical. I never saw such a girl!"

Felice came in slowly, her lips drooping. It was very hard for her to understand why she shouldn't make friends with people just because they didn't have a big house like she did, or because they walked, instead of riding in automobiles.

"Tell Marie to bring you your wraps," said her mother. "We are going to the Bolton Settlement house. I must talk over some plans for the charity ball. You may go along."

"I love to go there," said Felice. "But didn't father say we oughtn't to go into that neighborhood on account of the strike trouble?"

"Your father is upset over some trouble among those foreigners," replied her mother. "I really didn't pay much attention."

She did pay attention, however, when she realized that they were in the heart of the strikers' district. Sullen-faced men filled the streets. The car passed little knots of people who looked at Felice and her mother threateningly. Then the machine came to a dead stop. There were people everywhere, and not a friendly face among them.

Felice looked frightened. For once her mother forgot her dignity. The chauffeur covered in his seat.

Suddenly Felice opened the door of the limousine and jumped out on the running board. "Pedro!" she shouted. "Please come drive us home!"

A young man, who seemed to be well known among the strikers, made his way to the front.

"Sure, I'll drive you home," he said. The crowd opened up. Felice looked at her mother and spoke with a little grin. "Mother, don't you think you might let me pick my own friends?"

THE GRAND OLD DOGS

"Wouldn't you hate to be a traveler, lost in the snow on a night like this?" shivered Clyde.

"You bet," agreed Mills. "I was just reading about how in the old days travelers used to get lost in the Swiss Alps and the monks from the monastery of St. Bernard used to go out with their big St. Bernard dogs and find these lost wanderers and bring them in to the warm, safe monastery. The dogs would find the way."

"I've heard a lot about those dogs," said Clyde. "Wish we had one. It's a shame so many of them were killed off when they were used as Red Cross dogs in the war."

Mills nodded. "People don't appreciate those fine dogs, and they don't raise them so much any more, because they aren't very popular as show dogs. They're the biggest dogs in the world. For hundreds of years the monks bred them especially for their intelligence, strength and working qualities."

"Last summer," said Clyde, "I noticed a family down at the beach that had one to guard their children. The St. Bernards are great water dogs, you know. This old fellow was a regular nursemaid for those kids. He'd chase after them and run with them just like a regular human being."

"They're brave dogs, too," added Mills, "but they're not fighters. I guess those travelers in these nowstorms on the mountains never dreamed that some day we might neglect those 'grand old dogs.'"

"I hope they don't disappear. I guess those travelers in these nowstorms on the mountains never dreamed that some day we might neglect those 'grand old dogs.'"

THE MOTHER OF IT

Little Johnny Warthog has a most unlovely face.

His eyes are much too tiny, and he's lacking style and grace. He has an ugly kind of snout, his teeth are out of place—And yet I'll bet his mother thinks for looks he sets the pace.

Felix Hippo has a mug that—well, let's call it plain; He has a monstrous body and a very little brain.

And when his mouth is opened up, outlookers get a pain—And yet I'll bet his mother thinks he's handsome, in the main.

George Gorilla's claim to looks is really very small; His chin slopes out, his forehead in, his neck's built like a wall.

He drags his hands upon the ground; he's wider than he's tall—And yet I'll bet his mother thinks his beauty beats them all.

Bill Giraffe, you must admit, is hardly lovely to scale; Too much proportion in his neck, too little in his tail.

He has such silly little horns, as ornaments they fail—And yet I'll bet his mother thinks that William is a whale.

Elmer Camel is a beast that gets no beauty prize; He has a hump, an ugly mouth, and wicked little eyes.

He has a funny, rolling gait; he utters squally cries—And yet I'll bet his mother lauds her offspring to the skies.

Nels Muskrat gets his funny looks from his paternal side; He has a very clumsy walk, and unattractive hide.

When Nature made him all the laws of beauty she defied—And yet I'll bet his mother views her son with glowing pride.

TRAILIN'

BY MAX BRAND

Next Week, "The Columbus of Space," by Garrett P. Serviss

"The door went down like nothin' because we was both husky fellers in them days, and as she smashed in the fall upset two of the boys sittin' closest and gave 'em no chance on a quick draw. The rest of 'em was too paralyzed at first, except old Ptolemy. He pulled his gun, but what he shot was Tom Shaw, who just leaned forward in his chair and crumpled up dead.

"We went at 'em, pumpin' lead. It wasn't no fight at first and half of 'em was down before they had their guns workin'. We had the jump on 'em but they meant business. I dropped to the floor and lay on my side shootin'; Bard, he followed suit. They went down like tenpins till our guns were empty. Then we up and rushed what was left of 'em—Ptolemy and his daughter. Bard makes a pass to knock the gun out of the hand of Joan and wallops her on the head instead. Down she goes. I finished Ptolemy with my bare hands."

"Broke his back, eh?"

"Me? Whoever heard of breakin' a man's back? He, in? You been hearin' fairy tales, son. Nope, I choked the old rat."

"Were you badly hurt?"

Lawlor searched his memory hastily; there was no information on this important point.

"Couple of grazes," he said, dismissing the subject with a tolerant wave of the hand. "Nothin' worth talkin' of."

"I see," nodded Bard.

He had picked up the book which Lawlor had just laid down. The title, whose meaning dawned slowly on his astonished mind as a sunset comes in winter over a gray landscape, was "The Critique of Pure Reason."

He turned the book over and over in his hands. It was well thumbed.

He asked, controlling his voice: "Are you fond of Kant?"

"Eh?" queried the other.

"Fond of this book?"

"Yes, that's one of my favorites. But I ain't much of a bookworm."

"However," said Bard, "the story of this is interesting."

"It is. There's some great stuff in it," mumbled Lawlor, trying to squint at the title, which he had quite overlooked during the daze in which he first picked it up.

Bard laid the book aside and out of sight.

"And I like the characters, don't you? Some very close work done with them."

"Yep, there's a lot of narrow escapes."

"Exactly. I'm glad that we agree about books."

And he smiled genially upon the cowpuncher. Bard felt a great relief sweep over him, a mighty gladness that this was not Drew—that this loose-lipped gabbler was not the man who had written the epitaph over the tomb of Joan Ptolemy. He lied about the book; he had lied about it all. And knowing that, he drew, he felt suddenly as if someone was watching him from behind, someone large and gray and stern of eye, like the giant who had spoken to him so long before in the arena at Madison Square Garden.

The booming voice of Shorty Kilrain echoed through the house: "Supper!"

And the loud clangor of a bell supported the invitation.

"Chow-time," breathed Lawlor heavily, like one relieved at the end of a hard shift of work. "I figure you ain't sorry, son?"

He had to break off this talk. I've learned a lot."

"No," answered Bard, "but it's too CHAPTER XIX.

The Show.

"You first," said Lawlor at the door.

"I've been taught to let an older man go first," said Bard, smiling pleasantly. "After you, sir."

"Any way you want it, Bard," answered Lawlor, but as he led the way down the hall he was saying to himself, through his stiffly mumbled lips: "He knows! There's going to be hell 'tween 'em before long."

He lengthened his stride going down the long hall to the dining room, and entering, he found the cowpunchers about to take their places around the big table. Straight toward the head to the big chair he stalked, and paused an instant beside little Duffy. Their interchange of whispers was like a muffled rapid-fire, for they had to finish before young Bard, now just entering the room, could reach them and take his designated chair at the right of Lawlor.

"He knows," muttered Lawlor.

The food which Shorty Kilrain and Calamity Ben now brought on was distinctly utilitarian rather than appetizing. Yet the cattlemen about the table settled themselves for the meal with a pleasant expectation fully equal to that of the most seasoned gourmand in a Manhattan restaurant.

In the meantime little Duffy had passed on to the next man, in a side mutter, the significant phrase: "He knows!" It went from lip to lip like a watchword passing along a line of sentinels.

As for Bard, he stuck by his original apparent indifference. For he still felt sure that the real William Drew was behind this elaborate deception and the thing for which he waited was some revelation of the hand of the master. The trumps which he felt he held was in being forewarned; he could not see that the others knew his hand.

Their meal finished, the cowpunchers spilled and lighted cigarettes. Bard, puffing at a cigar which Lawlor had shoved on his accepting, in apparent meditation watched the smoke as it curled about the big gasoline lamp which hung suspended by a slender chain from the ceiling and immediately above the table.

Through the door stalked a new-comer. He paused and cast a curious eye up the table to Lawlor.

"What the hell?" he remarked naively. "Who's the chief?"

"Fired!" bellowed Lawlor without a moment of hesitation.

"Who fired him?" asked the new man, with an expectant smile, like one who waits for the point of a joke, but he caught a series of strange signals from the men at the table and many a broad wink.

"I fired him, Gregory," answered Lawlor. "I fired Nash."

He turned to Bard.

"You see," he said rather weakly, "the boys is used to callin' Nash 'the chief.' He used to be foreman here. Ain't no more. I couldn't stand for his lip."

"Ah, yes," said Bard, "I understand."

And Lawlor felt that he did understand, and too well.

Then a second form appeared in the doorway, lithe, graceful, and the light made her hair almost golden.

"By'nin', feller," called Sally faintly. "Hello, Lawlor; what you comin' at the head of the table?"

The bluff was ended. It was as if the wind blew a cloud suddenly from the face of the sun and let the yellow sunlight pour brightly over the world; so everyone in the room at the voice of Sally knew that the time had come for action. There was no vocal answer to her, but each man rose slowly in his place, his gun naked in his hand, and every face was turned to Bard.

"Gentlemen," he said in his soft voice, "I see that you know enough to rise when a lady enters the room. But you are all facing me. Is it possible?"

His gun, held at the hip, pointed straight down the table to Gregory, but his eyes, like those of a pugilist, seemed to be taking in every face at the table, and each man felt in some subtle manner that the danger would fall first on him. They did not answer, but hands were tightened around revolver butts.

And Sally Fortune, bracing herself against the wall with one hand, and in the capable grasp of the other a six-gun balanced, stared in growing amazement on the scene, and shuddered at the silences.

"Bard," she called, "what have I done?"

"You've started a game," he answered, "which I presume we've all been waiting to play. What about it, boys? I hope you're well paid: I'd hate to die a cheap death."

A figure ran around the edge of the crowd and stood beside him.

"Stand clear of me, Sally," he muttered, much moved. "Stand away. This is a man's work."

"The work of a pack of coyotes!" she cried shrilly. "I had a hunch there was trouble brewin' here. And I followed Bard and Nash to see if I was right. Are you goin' to murder a tenderfoot among you? One that ain't done no real harm? I don't believe my eyes!"

"There's no harm intended him, on my honor, Sally," said Lawlor. "All he's got to do is give up his gun—and—and—he finished weakly—"let his hands be tied."

"Is that all?" said Sally, scornfully.

"Don't follow me, Sally," said Bard. "Stay out of this. Boys, you may have been paid high, but I don't think you've been paid high enough to risk taking a chance with me. If you put me out with the first shot that ends it, of course, but the chances are that I'll be alive when I hit the floor, and if I am, I'll have my gun working—and I won't miss. going to drop.

He moved slowly, deliberately toward the door, around the table. Still they did not shoot.

"Sally," he commanded, "go out of this room and through that door."

She passed out of the door and stood there, a glimmering figure against the night. Still there was not a shot fired, though all those guns were trained on Bard.

He jerked his gun up and fired, not at a man, for the bullet struck the thin chain which held the gasoline lamp suspended, struck it with a clang, and it rushed down to the table. There was a dull report, as of a shot fired at a great distance, the scream of Sally from the door, and then liquid fire spouted from the lamp across the table, whipped in a flare to the ceiling, and licked against the walls.

Anthony, scarcely believing that he was still alive, rushed for the door, with a cry ringing in his ears from a voice beyond the room. One man in all that crowd was near enough or had the courage to obey that cry even to the uttermost. The gaunt form of Calamity Ben blocked the doorway in front of Bard, blocked it with poison revolver.

"Halt!" he yelled.

But the other rushed on. Calamity whipped down her gun and fired, but even before the trigger was pulled Ben was sagging toward the floor, for Bard had shot to kill. Over the prostrate form of the cowpuncher he leaped, and into the night, where the white face of Sally greeted him.

ALLEGED FORGERS AGAIN IDENTIFIED

Augusta, Ga., January 17.—(Special.)—Two new developments in the case of the alleged forgers and swindlers accused of passing worthless checks on Alben banks, who were captured Sunday in Augusta, came to light this afternoon, when L. B. Wyatt and P. L. Hannett, president and cashier respectively of a LaGrange, Ga., bank, positively identified Lyles and Padgett, two of the accused, as being the same men who on November 23 perpetrated a similar swindle on three LaGrange banks.

The bank officials named Lyles as forger and passer of the checks and Padgett as his accomplice who was seen many times around the city and in the banks.

A committee of reputable citizens of Hephzibah were in Aiken for a number of hours yesterday afternoon and evening in behalf of the four prisoners accused of forgery. They testified to attorneys and newspaper men that each had seen all of the accused at work in Hephzibah the major part of last Thursday, the day on which the swindle was pulled off in Aiken. One of the Hephzibah men, however, stated that Padgett and Lyles had come to him on last Friday and asked for a job and that he had promised them one if they would return Saturday. They did not show up, he said, and the next thing he heard of them was when they were arrested in Augusta Sunday morning on the charge of forgery, swindling and wire cutting.

It was announced that the alleged forgers had applied for a bond to a surety company but that the money has not yet been received and they are still being held. It is understood that a preliminary hearing will be given them some time this week.

Es-King Premph, of Ashanti, who is held as a political prisoner on a remote island in the Indian ocean, has been baptized in the Christian church.

Policewoman Fires At Two Bootleggers; Gets Car and Liquor

Police officials were commenting Tuesday night on the nerve and daring of Mrs. Vannie R. McDonald, Atlanta policewoman, who recovered a stolen car from two bootleggers, captured a suitcase of whisky and almost brought to justice the two bootleggers.

Detectives searched Tuesday night for a white man and a negro who escaped from the policewoman after she had arrested them at a negro house in Oakland City in the act of delivering a suitcase of whisky.

Mrs. McDonald went with a friend to a negro laundrywoman's house near Oakland City late Tuesday afternoon. They stopped there in front of another negro house, and Mrs. McDonald remained in the automobile.

As she sat waiting for her friend to return from the washerwoman's house, she noticed a car drive up and stop behind the one she occupied. Overhearing some conversation about whisky, she began to take notice of the proceedings.

Soon a white man and negro alighted from the car and took a heavy suitcase into the house. Following them she covered them with her revolver after they had entered the house. She commanded them to return to their car with the suitcase. The white man got in the car at once, and started the motor and said he intended to turn the machine around. She made him stop the motor. "You'd better watch your negro," he told her. Turning, she saw the negro running away, and fired. As she turned the man in the machine got out and started running. She then turned her revolver on him, but he escaped.

The woman officer notified headquarters, and the car and whisky was confiscated by the department. Detectives Tuesday night said that the car has been recently stolen.

Benson Is Bride
Of Henry C. Arnall

Macon, Ga., January 17.—(Special.)—Miss Gertrude Benson, sister of Admiral W. S. Benson, of Washington, was married here tonight at the home of her brother, to Henry C. Arnall, president of a cotton mill at Newnan, Ga., and a trustee of the Cave Spring school for the deaf.

The ceremony was performed by Dr. R. E. Douglas, pastor of the First Presbyterian church here, in the presence of a large number of guests. The bride was in white, and the groom in a tuxedo. The wedding was a quiet affair, relatives being present.

The romance which resulted in the wedding began three years ago when Miss Benson accepted a position on the teaching staff of the Cave Spring school.

A few days in Macon the couple will leave for Newnan, where they will reside.

Dispute Referred To Labor Board

Nashville, Tenn., January 17.—Unable to reach an agreement on the railroad wage question, the management of the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis railway and the Order of Railway Telegraphers will submit their dispute to the Federal Railroad Labor Board for final action.

Following a conference recently between officials of the road and representatives of the telegraphers, the latter announced that they would not voluntarily accept the proposed decrease of 4 cents an hour, but on the other hand, wished an increase in wages of 6 cents an hour.

Since the conferences on the wage controversy were opened about two weeks ago with the various classes of employees only in two cases has definite decision been reached. The proposals of the road as applicable to the signal men and the telegraphers will be placed in the hands of the labor board for consideration, Mr. Bruce stated. The management is still discussing with representatives of practically all of the other employees.

However, joint submissions will more than likely be made to the "big four" transportation brotherhoods in Mr. Bruce's opinion. A series of conferences have been conducted with these men, but with no favorable result.

Conferences with the shop workers is still in progress, the general manager said. The question of reducing

TRUSTY ESCAPES FROM BIBB CAMP

Macon, Ga., January 17.—(Special.)—Ben Faircloth, a trusty at the Bibb county convict camp, escaped this afternoon with a wagon and team of mules belonging to the county. A reward has been offered for his capture and authorities in Columbus, Ga., have been notified to look out for him.

Faircloth was serving a sentence for the theft of automobile tires. He was hauling cinders in Macon today when his wagon broke down. He was sent back to the convict camp to get another wagon. He returned to the camp with a light wagon and one mule, and disappeared.

Was a "Bear Cat"
"My wife was never an angel, but after five years of liver and stomach trouble she became a 'bear cat.' No doctor or medicine helped her and we thought there was no help for her. Our grocer told me of Mary's Wonderful Remedy, which had helped him for some trouble, so I brought home a bottle, and she promptly threw it out. I got it back and after a week coaxed her into taking it. She is now enjoying the best of health and disposition." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and indigestion ailments, including appendicitis. One dose will convince or money refunded. Jacobs' Pharmacy and druggists everywhere. (adv.)
